

The greatest Sentence Ever Written

Mark Trotter tells the story of a fifth grade teacher who loved to hold what she called the Scholastic Olympics. She would ask each child to pick a sentence from literature, name the author and source from which it came, and then explain why this sentence could be called the most important sentence ever written.

You can probably guess what some of the entries were, like "Fourscore and seven years ago," and "All people are created equal." There were also a lot of literary phrases, like "To be or not to be." One of the girls who used that one lost some points because she thought it was from the Bill Cosby show.

You know what sentence won? It was not written by a famous author at all. It wasn't to be found in any literary source. It appeared on a postcard from Hawaii that one of these fifth grade girls, Charlotte, received from her stepfather, who was on a honeymoon with her mother. The teacher was uneasy about this, because the children were supposed to stand in front of the class and explain why this is the most important sentence ever written. But she let Charlotte speak. Charlotte explained that until she received that postcard, she didn't know how her stepfather felt about her, but now she knows, and she said it changed everything for her. The sentence was, "Charlotte, I love you."

Perhaps that is the most important sentence every written, because wherever it is heard, and from whatever source it comes, it constitutes a blessing.

That is ultimately the blessing we all receive in Christ—our Father's love. You can find it in the best story every written (the Bible) in John 3:16—"For God so loved the world that he gave his only son, that whoever believes in him should not perish but have eternal life." To me, this is the greatest sentence ever written. It IS LIFE for us all. It is the centerpiece of our faith, and it is certainly the truth of Easter.

This Easter season, may we all claim God's love for us, and may we then find a way to SHARE IT with others. Look around for those persons who you know need his love and haven't yet received the postcard. Everyone needs to hear 'I love you.' And you can help them—invite them to church this Easter.

The Cross, Resurrection, and the Easter Bunny

The Easter season begins on Ash Wednesday and continues for ninety days until Pentecost. It includes forty days of Lent leading up to Holy Week, culminating in the commemoration of the Death on the Cross and Resurrection of Jesus Christ on Easter Sunday. Unlike some Protestant denominations, Methodism has retained the observation of Ash Wednesday, Lent, Maundy Thursday, and Good Friday, as well as Easter. It is a beautiful and sacred time for Christians. But, we might ask, "How did the rabbit get to play such a prominent part in our celebration?"

Although references may vary somewhat, it is generally believed that the term "Easter" originated with pagan religious celebrations. One theory is that the term began centuries ago in pre-Christian Anglo-Saxon history. The people worshipped the fertility goddess Eastre in a pagan celebration of spring. Because of its fecundity, the rabbit was Eastre's earthly symbol. When these people converted to Christianity and saw that the celebration of Christ's resurrection from the dead occurred about the same time as their holiday, they combined the two celebrations into one. Eventually, the hiding and hunting of eggs, another fertility symbol, became a part of the Easter season.

The first edible bunnies are supposed to have originated in Germany in the early 19th century; German immigrants brought bunny customs to Pennsylvania when they settled there. Now, all kinds of rabbits are everywhere before Easter. It has become so commercialized that some churches are calling Easter "Resurrection Sunday."

Recently, I strolled down a double row of candy bunnies and eggs at Walmart. Suddenly, amid the chocolate marshmallow bunnies, I saw some smaller boxes with "He lives" and "He is risen" printed on them. I turned one over, and it contained a chocolate marshmallow cross – someone's effort to inject a religious symbol among the rabbits.

I thought about it and wondered what Jesus might think when He looks down on this scene. Would He smile and say, "Look at all that hullabaloo to celebrate my resurrection?" And what would John Wesley think about it?

Mary Knight

PSFUMC membership is more than simply adding a name to our roll.

When we join the Church, we promise to support her with our prayers, our presence, our gifts, our service, and our witness. Here are some ways our members find to carry out that promise.

Supporting the church through my prayers means being faithful to continually update my prayer list to include the ongoing needs of the church family, to pray over the list daily, and to link prayer with praise and thanksgiving to our God. Mary Knight

Supporting the Church with my Gifts means offering Something Above a tithe of my Social Security income each month. Linda Cruselle

One of my favorite ways to support my church is with my service. I have volunteered at Music Camp, Vacation Bible School, Operation Christmas Child, cleaning up after activities... the list goes on and on. It brings me joy to know that I can help others in this way. Rene Dae

Supporting my church with my service means volunteering in the nursery, even if it's once a quarter or only for special occasions. Roxy Cupp

Supporting the church with my service means using my gift as a teacher to help with egg hunts, VBS, and Music Camp even though my kids have outgrown these things. (They're able to help now!). Dena Hudson

During the flooding of September 2009, I had planned to go to the church on "flood bucket" Saturday to just "be available" to help in some way. I was sent out with Sandi, Jake and another cub scout (I'm sorry I don't know his name), and Reverend Susan. We went to the assigned house, but our steps were redirected to the house next door. The man that lived there had been living on his carport all week with only the help of a young man that had been doing his best to clean out what he could by himself. Dave and Libby showed up, and a trio from another church. We basically "dove in," almost literally! We worked all afternoon cleaning out sopped belongings. The homeowner (Dennis) watched in amazement, tearing up every so often. He had health issues and could not do the work. It was filthy work, dangerous in many aspects. My shoes were so dirty that they left a musty, stinky smell in my car all week. I was reminded of the experience every time I got into my car. Dennis was touched by us being there, and being there really touched us. I wouldn't take a minute back. Be available, open hearted and let God do something wonderful through you! Remember to look up! Jane Freeman

Supporting my church means praying openly with others and getting joy explaining 'where I go to church' and why. Christians are so easy to spot as I travel; they are the ones with their hearts open, and a hand out because of Christ. I have found that asking now to pray with others at lunch has become contagious – and I love it!! Seems like Georgia, Tennessee and those Alabama folks love it the most though. Dora and I laugh as I explain how folks look at one another sometimes when I ask to bless the food at a luncheon—you'd think I'd ask sometimes for them to pick up the tab. It leads to fellowship immediately afterward and that's a great thing. Dora & Rod Fortson

Supporting my church with my witness means to invite the person I talk to in line at the grocery to Sunday service. Roxy Cupp

Supporting PSFUMC with my service sometimes means stepping outside of where I feel totally comfortable but knowing that God honors that and our church family supports us even when we make mistakes and feel overwhelmed. What a joy, privilege and honor we have to serve our God. Steve Piper

Supporting the church with my gifts means recognizing what my spiritual gifts are and watching for ways to use them in one of the many ministries available. Julie Banks

Palm Sunday brings our yearly confirmation class to its completion and our church family gains new members. What an exciting time in the lives of our youth ministry. Confirmation class educates our attendees on what it means to "Claim the Name Christian". The class studies the Trinity, our spiritual gifts, Methodism and its history, and faith practices that help us to grow our relationship with our Father in Heaven. We have 5 confirmands that will accept the gift of salvation and become members of our church. I am so proud and blessed to have been a part of this journey with them.

Just as we are gaining 5 new members, May will bring graduation for many of our other members. It is a sad day as we will miss these seniors' involvement and leadership. However, it is also great joy as we reflect on this church's influence on their lives and celebrate their accomplishments thus far.

Several of our youth attended Camp Glisson for a Spiritual Life Retreat the end of February. It was great to be in the midst of the beauty at Glisson but to also be fed the messages regarding the theme "Breathe". The speaker helped us understand that we begin and end our earthly lives with God's breath going in and out of our bodies constantly. It was amazing worship and teaching as we learned what it means to have this gift inside us each day. I must admit I have felt a little more powerful and confident knowing I am being filled with our Creator each time I breathe in.

I hope that through our church's efforts to help us learn more about our spiritual gifts, you have discovered ways God wants to use you in this Body of Christ. My prayer is that many have found a passion to serve in the youth ministry. These years of our youth being in our presence are few and very critical that they develop a firm foundation before going off on their own. I need your help and welcome adult leadership. Contact me if God has been laying this on your heart.

I can't believe it's a year since I became staff at PSFUMC. I still have so much to learn and accomplish - that's always changing in youth ministry. Thanks for entrusting your youth in my leadership. It has been so rewarding and assuring being where God wants you to be. I love my job!!

No Regrets!

Jane
